Interesting Town Meeting Predicted Rumors of Several Candidates

The usual modesty of local talent in considering public office doubtless is the reason for the dearth of public announcements of candidacy in this issue. We are informed on good authority however that several offices will be contested at the annual meeting Monday morning.

The members of the Budget Committee did well at their meeting on February 2" Their recommendations, if followed, will save the town $15,000. They followed the advice of Frank A. Brown, thairman of the Board of Selectmen, in town appropriationand there all the proposed saving is to be effected.

In school mutters they did as the Superintendent and school committee wished. The amount asked for schools totals $24,400 as last year. High school Iuition is increased $700 and the common school account is that much less, but there is nearly $600 left from list year, so it would appear that no widespread economy is anticipated.

The majority of townspeople those not enjoying "fixed salarles"--whose incomes are affected by necessary wage cuts, tax-offs, or the like, cannot seem to understand why the school hudget cannot be cut down without a

Alas, No More

By RUBY DOUGLAS

(2) by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service) TI HAPPENED that after receiving an invitation to be best man for his Mast bachelor friend, Clark Darlington came upon a relic of his college days in the form of an old photograph fle sat before the fireplace in his scomfortable room and held the old frame before him so that the light from the fire shone on the faded photographs of six girls. It had once the fushion for college boys to frame theirs various loves thus: "My wifty girl, my pretty girl, the girl that 1 ndore; my winter girl, my summer girl, my girl alas—no more."

He-studled each face, successively. "Yes; June was my witty girl. She always had a merry quip to greet you with or a joke or a story," he solilooulzed.

The next face was beautifully carved out as a cameo. "And Bertha was the prettiest girl I knew. No doubt of her right to that title in the frame." And perhaps I did adore Clara." He had passed to studying the third face. "Babs was a peach of a winter girl.

Beth was a light and frilly summer girl and-" He had reached the last face in the frame-"my girl alas-no more." shadow had crossed his eyes. This, then, was the girl. Constance Hoyt was, alas, his girl no more, and yet he had never found one to take her place. The cause of their quarrel had been trivial enough-her annoyance at his behavior at his senior dance. And lie had defied her right to criticize him and had gone on tossing wild outs here and there until the girl would have nothing to do with him. He had not heard of her for fears. Probably she was married; possibly she was gone. When he retired that night he had not put the pleture frame back in the drawer with the relics of his past. He had slipped it along the mantleplece so that the photograph of his girl, "alos,-no more," was in the center where he could see her face at all

For the next few days he was busy attending to last-minute duties of a well-informed best man. Therefore, he had had little time to think of the former love whose face had recalled such tender memories of a lost ro-

It imprened that the name of the little girl who was to carry the ring up the alsle on a satin pillow was Constance. She was a prefty tot and Clark gulte fell in love with her at the before the wedding. "Isn't she a doll?" asked the bride-

"She's all of that. Where did you

"Oh-she's the daughter of one of my old school friends. She's married oce and-this is her wee daughter. Don't forget anything, Clark, Tom is so flighty these inst few days."

The best man was the least nervous of the whole wellding party when the organist began to play the wedding march that should usher them into the

All eyes were on the lovely little girl who carried the ring. She stepped gracefully along the alsie to the strains of Lohengrin's march. Clark watched

As the child passed one of the lower pews he saw her turn her little face up and smile. Clark looked at the face of the woman whom she had precied and there, almost obscured from his vision by a cluster of American Beauty roses, was Constance-his giri-nins, no more!

From that moment on he had no interest in Tom and his wedding. Here entirely out of his reach and more beautiful than ever he had functed her -was the only girl he had ever loved. After the ceremony things moved so unlekly that he lost sight of Constance. But he realized that she would be at the breakfast and that no doubt he should have an opportunity to speak with her. He wondered whether he dared to trust tilmself.

Almost before he had decided, he found himself beside her with her lit-"Clark—Clark Darlington," she was maying, "I—I thought it must be you." "I had seen your little daughter," Clark said, awkwardly. "And-I have an old photograph of you in my room. Strangely chough, I was looking at it

"I'm sure it's lovely," inughed Con-"Your-liveband? is he here?"

*sked Clark. "You must remember that I do not even know your name-

Constance did not maswer at once. Clark walted. Poor old Don is Somewhere in France. Didn't you know? He and were married only six weeks when it was called to his regiment." 'Oh-" Clark Darlington had never felt to awkward.

But later he recovered and lost no time in finding out all he could of Constance. She seemed as glad to have found him as he was to have discovered her again.

was an intensive woolng and hen at last Clark had promised fittle Constance he would be a good haddy to her, he felt that Tom's wed ling had been the happless day of the "TAL MAN'A LIFE.

LIGHTS) By WALTER TRUMBULL of NEW YORK

Although we watched it rise, story by story, and although it is only t comparatively short distance from where we live, we never until recently visited the tower of the Empire State building. That is, of course, because we happen to dwell in New York. There are many things in the city which no resident knows half as much about as does some visitor from thousands of miles away. Nor is that pecullar to this portion of the country. We met a man the other day, who has lived for years in Seattle and never has seen Rainter park. We know Chicagoans who never have been inside the Field museum. Once having reached the top of the Empire State, we were sorry we had not gone before. From street level New York is a pretty impressive place. From that tower, it looks like some thing a child has constructed of blocks. The translantic liners, lying at their toy docks, are little boats one might sail in a bathtub, And man raised that building, beam by beam and stone by stone. It was something of an achievement,

You may say that Mt. Everest is almost twenty-five times as high. Man did not raise that and from its peak the Empire State might not look like much. That is true enough, but men In airplanes have been higher than Mt. Everest. Considering that only a short while ago, as time is measured, the highest man ever got was to the topmost limb which would bear his weight, he has done pretty well. If he keeps on, he may get somewhere.

Yet, looking down from that tower at the largest city on this continent, at the cars which look like a procession of crawling until and the pedestrians who look like ily specks, mules tract bridge.—Los Angeles Times. man feel a bit humble, a little more doubtful of his Individual importance to the universe. They say that, even from the top of the Empire tower, the stars still look pretty for away.

The things that interested us about the Empire State tower were not the facts told by the books for sale in the observation room. We don't care much how many pounds of steel or how many thousands of bricks went into its construction, or how far the wires and pipes would reach if laid end to end. We were interested to see that already efforts had been made to obliterate names hastily and surreptitiously scrawled in penell on the stone. and to note that persons who appeared to be perfectly comfortable in the observation room at the base of the lower were noticeably nervous in the observation room at the top. Probably one reason is that the latter room is so much smaller that it gives them a feel-long distance above the ground. We

she got from a beat lying at a dock Visitors with whom we ascerded in the elevators evidently expected to feel the ascent. One passenger opered his mouth and put his lingers to his ears, but we could discover little or as sen sation due to the ride. The objectors run so smoothly that you do to real ize they are proce ing raple up ward. Some of the ven who run them told me that they rever had experienced any feeling of rising sufficienty to a height.

The attendants of the top a mitted that they answer bundreds of questions daily. Visitors usually wish to know whether the tower aways and ask concerning the wind-relocity. There are instruments in the tower which measure both these things.

One thing we noticed was that smoking was permitted on the open terrace which surrounds the lower observation room. Having peered at the human race for some time, we suspected visitors might be solved with an irresistinte desire to flick eigorette butte over the restraining wall toward the street for below. But those we saw never all this. Perhaps they felt close enough to the sky to be careful of their manners.

Why Numerals on Coins

King James I of Great Britain reigned from 1002 to 1025. Prior to his reign coins were not marked with their value; they were known by their size. Ring James was the first to have the coins marked. On the deld back of his beed he had the numeral XII marked to indicate a shilling and VI to indicate a sixpence, half the ratue of a shilling.

Why "Round Robin" The term 'round robin" was used to designate a neck ruff worn in the Sixterath century. Gradually it came to be applied to a form of petition on which the names were rigned in a circle to obviote giving particular prominence to any name or names. Hence the term as used today.

A Contribution to The Citizen by D. S. Brooks, Rethel

I um a lover of good poetry! It has always been a custom with me in preschion a sermon to make use of the musical lines that are attune with my measure. From my long list of favorite poets. If you were to ask me to make a choice of the they would he Pavid and Longfeller They were great singers. David screatest song is the one we call the Shepherd Panim. While I would not may that Longiellow's "Pealm of Lefe" was his greatest poom, it is perhaps the most popular and has been of the most implication and comfort to the world. Each of those poems teacher many clety. Jesmins not found in the other; but together they hold two or three great leasons from which we ought to find confort and Inspiration.

The first thought which suggests it well to me is that both to David and Longfellow life was not a drift withont meaning, but was an orderly progress full of purpose. David thinks of m man and part of a great flock. The billedde was before him, and there were his sheep which he had led with little settlement called Confluentla. [T ISN'T often that Romance may be traced, to its roots. Usually it is not recognized until it bursts into

So, when Ned Christle told Helen Gage that she was made for him she dld not believe it. "How do you know?" she naked. souchly.

"Has your mother never told you thout our earliest days-yours and mine, dear?" he asked.

Helen shook the head that would have been a riot of curls if she had permitted them to grow long enough: Ned was thoughtful for a moment. He was wondering why Helen's mother had withheld the wonderful story from her daughter. Knowing Mrs. Gage almost as he knew his own mother, he realized that she must have had good and sufficient reason for her silence.

"Well-is it such a deep-dyed secret that no one can tell me?" asked Helen, still frivolously. She was very happy, very much in love and nothing else muttered asked Helen "It is our Romance," he told her, Helen cuddled up in the blg chintz covered swing "Then-tell me, please. Ned-die." she implored.

"No-o. Il's just-beautiful," said her serious lover. "As beautiful as our Romance?"

He laughed. "It seems funny-my telling you this,"

"I don't want to know it-it it's funny. I don't feel like listening to anything humorous," she pouted. "You sald it was Romance."

"It is—the most beautiful romance in the whole world," he said, solemnly "You were a tiny girl—a wee baby it arms and-your mother had wanted you to be a boy."

Helen sat up and was about to pro test when he southed her into negalecence again.

"My mother had been disappointed because I was a mere boy when she had always wanted a daughter. Our mothers had been friends since college days. They had confided in each other and when each one was frustrated In her wish for a child of another sex —they still confided. I don't know just how it all came about, dear, but little by little you and I were exchanged. I would go to your mother for a week. You would come to mine and so both mothers learned to lave us almost equally."

"Yes-and the fun I used to have "Then we went away to college and -well. You know we seemed to grow apart. Your mother, for the first time, appreclated the value of a lovely daughter-"I bow," interrupted Helen, in mock humbleness.

"And my blessed mother began to be proud of a ble son. There was a certain, well-controlled tealousy in her niffinde when I used to what to go to your house so much during racation, and I noticed that when you came to visit us, your mother came along It was amusing—then "

"But what happened after mother took me to Europe? Did they quarrel or what?" naked Helen, serious now. "Yes-I never knew exactly how it came about, but my mother must have said something about your belonging to her eventually, after all. Meaning, of course, that you would marry Inc.

"The idea," began Helen with asperity.

"Walf a minute, dear," consoled Ned It has all come out right, lass't her "Before you came back from abread, your mother and mine had written many fetters that cleared the altuntion for them and they fell luio each others' arms when you returned, They decided they were selfish to have quarreled and -well, that each of them had gained, at last, her heart's desire. I don't mind saying that I think my mother is getting the best of the bargala, dear." .

"I can't subscribe to that, but I do think mother pight have told me all about it."

"I believe she was afraid, deep down In her heart, Helen, that If you be-She was wise in keeping her secret wishes from you until it was too late for son to bolt," laughed Ned. "And it in saloo tate? - ini'i 1(?"

"Alas - It is," answered Helen.

Algeria

The first impression of Algerian antives comes when sallors and boatnien swarm up to the steamer at the time of landing. They are a pleatical and culthroat looking gong, decided ly picturesque, and anything but with a still more live and energotic clean. Although descendants of pirates, they are considered awkward and stupld at managing a boat. In the streets of the towns are many oriental types—the Moore of mixed Spanish and Ambian blood have de generated physically and mentally from the builders of the Albaiabea being now mostly beggars and polilaborers. The Arabs, or Hedouins "stolld and squalld" also look like i conquered rack. Most of the short are kept by Jews, but the Kabele form the largest part of the popula tion. These men are of a buri nauntaln race abowing iraces o Greek and Roman ancestry in their complexions, and even in their laws.

The same story was later told of Andrew Cant's son of the same name who was principal of Edinburgh university and who died in 1728. Although the surname of the two Cants may have been popularly associated derisively with canting, "cant" is undoubtedly derived from the Latin. According to the Oxford dictionary, "cantare" was used contemptuously in reference to church services as early as 1183. "Cant" in English was first applied to the sing-song language of beggars about 1540, a usage religious mendicants who went about chanting. - Pathunder S

Frequently it occurs to some of us not acquainted with the very thorough manner in which nature equips all of her creatures to meet emergencies, to wonder how it is that, baby birds, whose soft, immature beaks are easily damaged, are able to peck their way to freedom through shells that are oftenlines very tough and hard. Close observers have discovered that each tiny chick, whatever the species, is provided with a special instrument to aid it in escaping from its eggshell prison. This is known as the "egg tooth," and consists of a hard-pointed plate growing on the tip of the upper half of the beak. The "egg tooth," which has no other purpose than that of breaking the shell at the proper time, drops from the beak after the bird is hatched.

Those exactly divisible by four are leap years, except the years ending n century, such as 1800, 1900, etc., which are leap years only if exactly divisible by 400, such as 2000, 2400, etc. The years 1016, 1020, 1024 and 1028 were all leap years. The reason for this method of figuring leap years is that the exact solar year (or time taken for the earth to revolve around the sun) is_365.24224 days. If every fourth year were leap year, this would make the average year 365.25 days long, an excess of .00020 day, Consequently the present or Gregorian calendar provides for only 97 leap years in every 400 years, making the average year 305,2425 days, or very nearly

TOM JACKS didn't suspect, when he got into the subway that morning, that he was stepping into the presence of the only girl who could one day tear his heart to shreds if she said "no" Instend of "yes."

There were plenty of seats because It was just past the rush hour, so Tom sat down beside a perfect paragon in a delicate mauve costume.

Apparently she was a business girl, for she was rending over a batch of letters with business hendings. And from the swift if definite glances Tom was able to get at them, he knew them to be orders. To craned his neck a bit and was rewarded with a trifle more information. The firm name to whom the letters were addressed was "Sue Wentworth, Inc." Arriving at his office he looked up the telephone book and found therein the name he sought. And after it was one word "Stationery," "Joy!" was Tom's mental exclamation, "This is where I start in to buy stationery. Heretofore he had left this line of office supplies to the two girls who purchased typewriter ribbons, carbon paper, pencils, blotters, etc., when they required them. Not so now. He went outside to a public telephone booth and called up

Sue Wentworth, Inc. A delightful voice, crisp, but pleasant, answered him. . "This is Tour Jacks, Inc., said Tom. "I want to know how soon I can get some office supplies." "Well-my calling days are Tuesday and Friday when I bring my samples for selection."

"But I'm in a desperate hurry-not n sheet of letter paper in the office," Tom said, and in his mind's eye saw his well-stocked shelves; "is there no way I can gettiny order in?"

"Certainly, if you care to send some one along to my office—I can put your order straight through then. "Since it's most urgent, I'll just pop along new," said Tom. And if Sue Wentworth smiled it was only because she had so very many urgent orders -strangely enough most ly from masculine buyers.

Tom might have known her office would look like that. It was apple green enamel with black furniture, and here were flowers about-flowers at which Tom gazed darkly because he had a hunch from the variety of them they were brought by a lot of stupid men who perhaps came in when they didn't need stationery any more than Sue was placing her samples of letter paper and her blg albums of envelopes before him and he started a raudom selection. "I'll have some of that mauve paper, with monograms put on," he said "My girls are both in need of some private stationery. And we want a dozen typewriter ribbons, some bill-

I don't remember all we need, but I'll go through the stock and come along again with the order." "I'll come along on my next calling day-it will save you troubling to come here," suggested Suc sweetly. She had been taking down his orders in a most efficient way with apparently not a thought for the personal side of the situation. "No-I wouldn't have you carry these great albums about like that. I enti come here very ensily-no trouble at all." "I must say, all the men are very pice to me in that way, but I can assure you I am quite used to it—carrying my samples, I mean," She smiled more or less directly at Tom. "You see, I'm a business woman, pure and simple and expect to do these things." "You are no doubt pure and bustnesslike, but you're not simple-not a bit of it," said the intest of Sue's ndmirers. And with that sort of personal note he thought it best to go back to his own office and break the news about the new stationery to the ciris.

"But Mr. Jacks, we're completely stocked up-you ordered everything from pens to paper clips last month," expostulated Miss Smith. "Ah, ba," Inughed Tont: 'but that was way last month. Anyway, I've deelded that distinctive stationery in business is a great asset. From now on Jacks, Inc., will revel in the finest that's to be had." And Tom Jacks, Inc., certainly did blossom forth in some pretty fine spe-elmens of the stationer's art and printing. Ills associates began to suspect that Tom was acquiring temperament and hoped for the best. But Tom wasn't acquiring a scrap more temperations than he had ever possessed, which wasn't much: but he most certainly was bent on acquiring something that was far greater than anything else in the world-a happy beginning to a love affair. HEN the Kammerer children were asked their father's oc-merer the Grocer," with no sense of humble admission. In their city, "Kammerer the Grocer" was the fnest, most de luxe institution of its god in town. Indeed, there were tiose who moved away to metropolises like New York and Chicago, who found it necessary to write back to Kammerer for certain delicacies such as exotic spices, fruits, that were obtainable nowhere else.

"Kammerer the Grocer" was not just the corner tradesman catering to the green-and-tinned-needs of a small neighborhood area. Kammerer's baking, delicatessen, vegetable, fruit, timed and staples departments were so complicated and highly organized as any big business.

The stamp of Kammerer was the insignia of a housewife's ability to supply her family with the best.

Acsop Kammerer, while he did not actually serve the trade, could be found on the premises of the business from early morning until late at night, There were roomy if not particularly luxurious offices on the rear of the second floor, and he could either be found there, or in close and careful scruting of the needs of his various

At no time of the day, except the noon hour, was a customer, asking for the head of the concern, likely to be told that he was, out, or unavallable. Kammerer, who had built up this business almost single-handed, never relaxed his hold when success came. Nine and ten hours a day, six days a week, he gave it heart and body and soul, importunings of his wife and children to the contrary notwithstand-

"Acsop, Just think, our children have been to Europe six times now in all. Don't you think it high time we were entitled to just one holiday!"

"You're right, mother, 'That's what I'm planning. Next summer we'll join the young ones and see the world," "Father, you've been saying that for

"I mean it this time, mother. High time we were beginning to get something out of it. Next year this time the business can spare me."

The children, high-spirited twins of eighteen, were also of a mind. "Honestly dad, it's up to you and mother to come over with us next summer. You two durlings make us look saide,

"Never you nilnd, children, your father and I are going to France and l haly with you next June, It's coming to us."

And, finally, although as mother sald, she didn't actually believe it until they were on the boat, the Kammerer family, four strong, did set sail for the European trip, which the older pair had been contemplating, planning. dreaming, for at least two-thirds of their married lives.

The joungsters, pampered in every form of travel and education, and to whom the voyage was an old story, set out upon this one in the high spirit of the adventure of experience leading Innocence by the hand.

Within twenty-four hours after landing Acsop Kammerer and his wife were being awang through Europe according to the illictates of their two high-handed effervescent youngsters, who were determined on showing them

The results need not have been surprising, but they smote the parental Kammerers with something akin to humiliated dismay. had never even heard, It was one thing to hear Amy and Robert recite the expedition of their summer travels, year after year, when bey returned from the long and lux l orlous vacations afforded them by thele stay-ut-home parents, It was inother matter to come face to face with these wonders of European civilimiton; wonders to which their chiluren were innured, and stant there, Mother Kanimerer finally edmitted to her husband, like two duratells out

Their mutual admissions, kept hourded from one another dusing the and alx weeks of the telp, burst forth one night in their hotel room that everlooked the Arno in Florence,

"Assop, you may not know it, but we're a pair of what the children "ould call 'dumbells out of Datagae," He had been pitting healds the window, resting his tired and aching feet spon a pillow when this outburst came, and he turned upon his wife the fired defeated eyes she had been no-licing in him for weeks. "It's tereible, mother, If I have to face mother art gullery of another cathedral and pretend to those young-Mers that I know what ICs all about, foull about have to slip home my

*shes in an uro."

Aesop, Amy and Robert love and understand those pictures and the beauty of the architecture. There's just no use my pretending, Aesop, I don't knew a Del Sarto from a Raphael, and the worst of it is, I don't care, I'm tired, papa. My nack aches from gat-leries as much as your feet do." "The beauty is there airlight, mother. It's just that we haven't had the time to prepare ourselves to admire it, the way the children have. The whole world's not crazy, traveling these countries over for the wonders of their art and beauty. It's just that we Kammerers the Grocers haven't had time to become anything else."

"There's something in that, father," said his wife, easing the back of her neck with a ministering of witch-bazel. "I long, just as much as you do, to be able to make the children feel we're up to it, but I may as well confess, Accop, I don't know what it's all about. Take that lecture today in the gallery on Siennese art of the Fifteenth century, it wasn't easy to follow what he was saying, father, the way it was for the children because, they've had enough preparation for travel, to know what it was all about." "Exactly, mother! While we've been at home, being grocers, our children have been preparing themselves to enloy the things we will be outensts from all our lives, if we don't hurry up and begin to lay the ground work for us to enjoy it, too,"

"Now, what do you mean by that, Acsop?" asked his wife.

What he meant by that was to come as a great shock in the lives of Robert and Amy when they heard it, and the way they heard it was this;

One evening in the but of the Excelsior hotel in Rome, over cocktalls. Robert said to his sister;

"This trip is an awful frost, Amy Good Lord, if I had known the gove ernor and the governors lady were going to be a pair of sawdust bables on our hands! Did you see the poor old mater flop down for a cat map today in the house of Livia, right in front of the murals?"

"Yes, and it would have to be in front of 'Io Guarded by Argus,' I wouldn't say it to the dears for worlds, but can you imagine how they would welcome taking an earlier bont home? We could hop down to Antibes then for a couple of months on the Riviera."

"Ull be the last to suggest it to "Leave it to me, darling, I know

Two Chicago Bankers Prominent In Drive Against Depression

Charles G. Dawes (left), Chairman of the New Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Melvin A. Traylor, Chleago Banker.

THICAGO and the Middle West have a double interest in the success of the gigantic Reconstruction Finance Corporation which is now being organized in Washington following speedy action by Congress.

Charles G. Dawes, whose name is almost synonymous for the business community of Chicago will sit in the driver's seat as the active head of the great $2,000,000,000 Federal corporation just authorized by Congress.

Another Chicago banker, a Democrat who is being repeatedly mentioned as a man of Presidential timber, has the distinction of making a vital contribution to the initial strength and success of the Reconstruction Corporation. The gist of Mr. Traylor's proposal before a Senate Sub-Committee was that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be authorized to make loans to closed banks as well as to fluancial institutions and others needing its aid. Such a step would release substantial amounts of money to depositors whose funds had been "froz en" by the fallure of such banks.
